The need to get the best possible value from spending public money will always remain a constant for those entrusted with spending decisions. In this context it is vital that capital spending decisions are taken on the basis of highly competent professionally developed spending proposals.

Andrew Carty (Infrastructure and Projects Authority) and Joe Flanagan (Adviser to the Welsh Government and State of Guernsey on Better Business Cases) will present the UK Treasury 5 Case Model. It provides a clear framework for thinking about spending proposals and a structured process for appraising, developing and planning to deliver best public value.
